The complex roofline on this craftsman house includes two medium gables facing the street plus additional medium pitched gables on the south side. It has exposed rafters and support brackets and narrow clapboard siding, all strong characteristics of the craftsman era which began in approximately 1910 and lasted into the mid 1920's. The veranda porch is supported by two sets of double square columns with cobblestone bases. There is a cobblestone chimney and wood slat railing on the porch with small brackets on the slats added as decoration.

SIGNIFICANCE

19. Briefly state historical and/or architectural importance (include dates, events, and persons associated with the site.)

The varied bungalow styles were readily accepted and adopted into the Gilroy home collection for their many attributes. A pleasant home that featured overhanging eaves providing protection from the summer sun was an important consideration since most were first occupied in the summer months. Recessed porches allowed a place to sit and watch neighborhood activities from a protected vantage point. Ornament and detailing was straight forward reflecting the style of the structure itself. Well suited to the needs of a growing population, the significance to this survey is in the number of homes and variety of styles that remain relatively in their original condition. These create streetscapes that are important because of the unity of the whole more than the special qualities of any individual structure.
